Just Transition of Coal Communities – Searching the New Model of Local Sustainability

 Sustainable Development 6.24

 2024-09-04, 18:25 - 19:25

 6.24 Sustainable Development 6.24

Phasing out coal from energy production contains the risks of radical deterioration of the status of localities with coal extraction industries. The responsibility of global community, forcing this radical transformation in order to reach the carbon-free future, is to promote the just transition, where former coal communities should reveal the modern economic drivers and be the workshops of new sustainability models, viable in the changing world.
